

Who We Are & Claudia Goldin on Freakonomics Radio

NLN 101 Language & Writing Skills-2 (Week 7)

Instructor: Yangchen Roy

We will first do some guided-listening. We will listen to an audio piece where the editor of a magazine interviews the directors of the documentary film Who we are: A chronicle of racism in America and The Who We Are Project founder Jeffrey Robinson. The link is here.

1 Step 1: Determine content

1. The audio begins with
2. It then moves on to the

Wh-question words

Use the following Wh-words to make questions that help you put together the content of the audio. Using each wh-word make one question for the two parts of the video – (1) the clip from the documentary, and (2) the interview.

- what –
- who –
- when –
- where –
- how –
- why –

2 Step 2: Determine structure and arrangement of the content

- Now listen to the audio clip again.
- Arrange some or all of your wh-questions in an order that helps you determine the structure of the video. This means that you think about what kind of content comes after what.

3 Revise: Claudia Goldin explains the gender pay gap

You will now listen to a portion of the Freakonomics Radio podcast episode A New Nobel Laureate Explains the Gender Pay Gap, where Claudia Goldin discusses wage discrimination in an interview with the host. Note the content and the structuring of this content in the episode. Repeat what you did in the previous two sections. The link is here.

1. Use wh-questions to isolate the content.
2. Now arrange your wh-questions to see the pattern of organisation of the episode.